REMOTE SEARCH CUSTOMERS URGED TO CONDUCT ONLINE PC TEST

I would like to strongly encourage all our remote search customers to check your PCs before the 28th January 2005 to determine if those PC's will be able to perform search requests on Landgate after our current search system is decommissioned in March 2005.

Even if you use Landgate to conduct EAS2 enquiries, you will still need to check that your PC will be able to access Landgate's new Land Enquiries service to perform searches.

You can check your PC quickly and easily by visiting our PC test page on <http://www.testpage.landgate.com.au> and taking part in a simple three-step test.

If you complete the test before 4pm on Friday 28 January 2005 you will become eligible to win a bumper hamper valued at $100. Click here to visit the test page.

No technical know-how is required to take part in the test as technical details are automatically extracted by the test page once you have agreed to go ahead.

The results are immediate and may include technical information that you will need to discuss with your PC and software provider.

I recommend that you undertake the test now to allow sufficient time to complete any upgrades of your PC before March 2005. This will ensure that you can continue to conduct your land and property searches and prevent costly delays to your business after we decommission our current system.

Landgate's new Land Enquiries service will then become the only means by which you can conduct your search requests. Land Enquiries is an improved service which includes all the advantages of the Internet.

Click here to access our step-by-step guide on how to access the Land Enquiries system.

Watch out for Landgate online training information – coming soon!
